

Live and Interactive: Hands-on Media and Print-Making Projects

A Learning Through the Arts® Teacher Institute

Jump-start your school year with three days of in-depth, hands-on work with two remarkable Learning Through the Arts® artists. This three-day institute promises time to connect with core curriculum, media and the fine arts, and reflection on how you can adapt projects to work in your classroom and grade level. Two days will be spent with film maker James Reckseidler investigating video projects with connections to core curriculum. Eveline Koljin's one-day print making workshop will focus on science and math connections.

WEDNESDAY – FRIDAY, AUGUST 25 – 27TH, 9:00 A.M. – 3:00 P.M.

Facilitator: James Reckseidler

James Reckseidler is a writer/director based in Calgary, AB, whose short films have played both nationally and internationally. James trained in Media Arts at Sheridan College in Oakville, ON, after receiving his Bachelor of History (Honours) from the University of Calgary. His credits include writing and directing 12 short films, three years of television work, most notably on the award-winning HGTV Lifestyle Series, Holmes on Homes, and work as an Assistant Film Editor on renowned documentary filmmaker Philip Hoffman's All Fall Down.

Facilitator: Eveline Kolijn

Eveline Kolijn is a Calgary-based print media and multidisciplinary artist. An international childhood, and a Master's degree in Cultural Anthropology from the Rijksuniversiteit Leiden, The Netherlands, nurtured her interest in the diversity of human culture and nature. Science and nature inspire her art, and her work investigates forms and patterns in nature, organisms, and mechanisms. She also investigates the relationship of Man and Nature.
